Whitehall, June 27.

THIS Morning an Expreſs arrived from Holland, with Letters from the Head Quarters of the King's Army commanded by Prince Ferdinand of Brunſwick, at Kempen on the Lower Rhine, dated the 23d Inſtant, containing a general Account, That, the ſame Day, his Highneſs had gained a complete Victory over the French. The Action begun about One o'Clock in the Afternoon, and laſted above Six Hours; when the Enemy was obliged to retreat in Confuſion towards Nuys and Cologne. The Loſs in Prince Ferdinand's Army was very moderate; and his Highneſs, as well as the Hereditary Prince of Brunſwick, and the other General Officers, were all well. The King's Infantry encamped upon the Field of Battle the Evening after the Action; and all the Horſe and Light Troops were ſent out in Purſuit of the Enemy, whoſe Communication with Ruremonde, and the Lower Maeſe, is entirely cut off. Theſe Letters were wrote at Nine o'Clock at Night; and a particular Relation of the Action is hourly expected.

Another Expreſs arrived about the ſame Time, by the Way of Fluſhing in Zeeland, from His Majeſty's Reſident at Cologne, with Letters of the 24th Inſtant, containing the ſame Account as above, and theſe further Circumſtances, That the French themſelves did Juſtice to Prince Ferdinand's judicious Conduct, and to the Bravery of his Troops; and repreſented their Loſs to be very great, eſpecially from the Execution done by the Artillery. The French Swiſs Regiment of Lochman had not above 150 Men left of the whole Corps, and by Four in the Afternoon they had loſt 25 Officers. The Regiments on both Wings of the French Army had ſuffered proportionably; and that of Count Giſors in particular, who is himſelf dangerouſly wounded; and, it is ſaid, that not an Officer in it has eſcaped unhurt.

FRIDAY, June 30, 1758.

Whitehall, June 30.

Relation of the Battle of Crevelt, gain'd by His Britannick Majesty's Army, commanded by Prince Ferdinand of Brunswick, over the French Army, commanded by the Prince de Clermont, on the 23d of June, 1758.

AFTER his Highness Prince Ferdinand, by the well judged Motions he ordered the King's Army to make on the 12th of June, in turning the Left Wing of the French Army towards the Convent of Campe, had obliged the Prince de Clermont to quit his boasted Camp of Rheinberg, and to retire towards Meurs in the Night between the 12th and 13th, his Highness thought proper to give a new Position to our Army, by occupying the Heights, commonly called St. Anthony's Mountains, having the Town of Meurs in Front, at two full Leagues Distance from our Camp, the Right opposite to the Village of St. Tonnigsberg, in which 300 Grenadiers were posted as an advanced Guard, with 12 Pieces of heavy Cannon, which were more than sufficient to cover the Extremity of our Wing against any Attack. This Position was executed the 14th of June. On the 15th, about Five o'Clock in the Morning, his Serene Highness was informed, that the Enemy was advancing in four Columns upon our Right. His Highness immediately ordered three Guns to be fired as a Signal; and the whole Army was under Arms, in order of Battle, a Quarter of an Hour after. He went afterwards himself to reconnoitre, and saw distinctly, that, at about two Leagues Distance from our Right Flank, a considerable Body was coming over the Plain of Hulste, and marching towards Crevelt.

Not knowing whether this Body was followed by the whole Army, or whether it was only a Detachment of it, that was marching that Way, his Serene Highness halted till towards the Evening, when he received certain Information, that the French Army had marched towards Nuys; and that Prince de Clermont had only detached this Corps, under the Command of Lieutenant General Comte de St. Germain, in order to take Post at Crevelt.

Upon this Information, his Highness sent his Light Troops and Hussars to Kempen, and Wachtendorick, and ordered the Army into their Camp again.

On the 16th he changed the Position of the Army, in Consequence of the Motions we had seen the Corps of M. de St. Germain make: He ordered the Right to the Village of Altenkirchen, and continued the Left on the Heights of St Anthony.

On the 17th his Highness went himself to reconnoitre, towards Kempen, the Position of the Enemy's Detachment at Crevelt; but could not guess at their Reason for fixing this Detachment at such a Distance from their Army. In order, therefore, to be better informed of it, and to see the Countenance this Corps would hold, he ordered the Prince of Holstein with ten Prussian Squadrons, the five Squadrons of Hussars, and the three Batallions of Sporcken Guards, and Prince Charles, to march early in the Morning of the 18th towards Kempen: He farther ordered General Wangenheim to pass the Rhine at Duisbourg with four Batallions, viz. Scheiter, Halberstadt, Buckebourg, and Hanau, and the four Squadrons viz. of Bocks Dragoons, and the Light Troops of Luckner, and Scheiter, and to advance that Day towards Meurs.

General Sporcken, who, when we left Rheinbergen, had been ordered to keep his Post at Rheinbergen, as long as the Enemy should remain in Camp at Meurs, received, likewise, Orders to join the Army the next Day with five Batallions and six Squadrons; and to leave only Major General Hardenberg, with the two Batallions of Gothe and Stolzenberg, at Burick, and that of Diepenbroick at Orsoy. This being regulated, his Highness communicated his Designs and Orders to the Hereditary Prince of Brunswick, relating to an Expedition he proposed, viz. That his Highness should march the next Day, very early in the Morning, with a considerable Corps, towards Kempen: whilst the Prince of Holstein should advance with his Corps towards Hulste, whereby it would clearly appear, whether M. de St. Germain would retreat towards the Army, or whether the Army of Prince de Clermont would advance towards Crevelt, in order to encamp there. Agreeable to this Plan, his Highness the Hereditary Prince of Brunswick set forward, on the 19th, from the Camp, with the 12 following Batallions, viz. Block, Sporcken, Hardenberg, Wangenheim, Post, Dreves, Bock; the two Battalions of the Brunswick Life Guards, the Hessian Guards, the Hessian Life Guard Regiment, and Prince Charles's Regiment, accompanied with 12 Squadrons of Hessians, viz. four of the Dragoon Guards, two of the Life Regiment, two of Prince William's, and two of Meltitz; with three Mortars, four Pieces of Cannon of 12 Pounders, and four of 6 Pounders. He marched directly towards Kempen, from whence he could perceive no Alteration in the Position of Count St. Germain.

By a secret Order the said Prince was directed, in Case he perceived no Change in the Position of the Army and of the Flying Camp of the Enemy, he should march the next Day directly towards Ruremond, in order to endeavour to possess himself of the Magazine, as well as of 600 Militia, who were in Garrison there. At Six o'Clock in the Morning, his Serene Highness Prince Ferdinand in Person followed the Hereditary Prince to Kempen: He perceived some Movements in the Flying Camp, which were of a Nature to induce him to believe, that M. de St. Germain designed to march against the Prince of Holstein, who was encamped near Hulste. Soon after he was positively informed, that the Whole of the French Army had quitted Nuys, and were advanced on this Side Crevelt; on which having taken his Measures, and formed a Plan as the Case required, the Expedition to Ruremond was then first countermanded. Major General Wangenheim was ordered to advance early the next Day, with his Corps, towards Hulste, and Lieutenant General Sporcken was directed to march after Midnight, with the Army, and to advance, likewise, to the Plain between Hulste and Kempen. On the 20th of June all the Troops, his Serene Highness could dispose of, were, by this Means, reunited in this Camp, the Right of which extended towards Kempen, and the Left towards Hulste. The Head Quarters were fixed at Kempen; and, in order to prevent any useless Movements, his Highness ordered the Quarter Master General not to regard the Rank of the different Corps, nor the Order of Battle, but to place the Regiments, as a great Part of them were actually posted.

In this Manner the abovementioned 12 Battalions and 12 Squadrons under the Command of the Hereditary Prince formed the Right; next to them the four Battalions and four Squadrons under the Command of General Wangenheim on their Left; and the whole Army, which advanced under the Command of Major-General Sporcken from the Camp at Altenkirchen, formed the left Wing, which, together, made an Army of 35 Battalions and 58 Squadrons, including the six Squadrons of Hussars. His Highness had expected that Prince Clermont would advance that Day to give him Battle, but however no considerable Event happened.

On the 21st we observed a great Movement in the advanced Corps of Count St. Germain, and about Ten in the Morning, after decamping, we saw them filing off to their Left, and marching towards Anrath, where they joined their Grand Army.

In making this Motion, they abandoned the Town of Crevelt, which was on the Front of their Right Wing: Our Chasseurs possessed themselves of it directly, and his Highness also went himself there to reconnoitre the Position of their Camp, which was clearly discovered from the Steeple at Crevelt. He did not think fit either to keep the said Post, or to make any Change in the Position of his Army, in Consequence of which he ordered the Chasseurs and Hussars away from that Place, and the Enemy re possessed themselves of it an Hour afterwards.

On the 22d his Highness went again to reconnoitre the Camp of the Enemy, particularly on the Side of St. Anthony, on
